Course Learning Outcomes

You will experience lectures, seminars, practical workshops, laboratory work, tutorials and work based learning. These will involve both individual and group-based learning. You are encouraged to participate in a variety of ways – through classroom and web-based exercises, undertaking research, discussions and presentations. Research-active staff draw on a range of technology to engage you with your learning both during lectures, and while away from the lecture theatre, with dedicated programmes and applications allowing you to download lecture notes and readings, post blogs, debate pertinent issues on discussion boards, and to submit and gain feedback on assignments. For example, the course uses the system of Panopto to provide access to recorded lectures as well as links to websites, videos, and online guides are used to facilitate your learning beyond scheduled learning activities.
