Teaching, learning and assessment strategies

You will be taught by a team of experienced staff who have researched and published widely within the subject areas of Football, Sports Development, Sport Management, and Sport and Physical Activity Leadership. Many of our staff draw upon their own work experience with organizations such as The Football Association and Sport England to intellectually and practically engage, challenge and fully develop your own learning. Course delivery will use a combination of lectures, seminars, practical workshops, field trips. There will also be opportunities for you to experience 'real world' football business and management projects as well engage with industry-specific guest speakers.

You will be required to undertake a variety of assessment approaches that vary depending upon the learning outcomes of the unit delivered. The range of assessment styles includes: written reports and essays, oral presentations, e-portfolios, phase tests, collaborative projects. In addition you will undertake practical assessments related to the design, planning and delivery aspects relevant to a wide variety of football business management projects.

Assessment of these activities will be based on tasks which develop vocational skills, underpinned by subject knowledge, requiring higher levels of cognition in the upper levels of the course. As you progress through the levels of study the marking criteria for all assessment styles undertaken will be that much more rigorous, with the expectation you progressively demonstrate a more theory driven understanding of the football industry and business management issues and practices.
